The benefits of creating an account

Accessing personalised cancer information and support on our website is now easier than ever, with the latest release from the Digital Transformation programme.

This latest update delivers a new personalised experience for people living with and affected by cancer visiting our website.

Through a new registration process people can create a new account where they can save and store the information and support that they need in one place on their own personalised dashboard.

Get support when they need it

Whether they're having tests, have just been diagnosed or in treatment, people can access information that's most useful to them

Tailored information

Get information about different cancer types. People can also get advice about work and benefits, and support if they have children

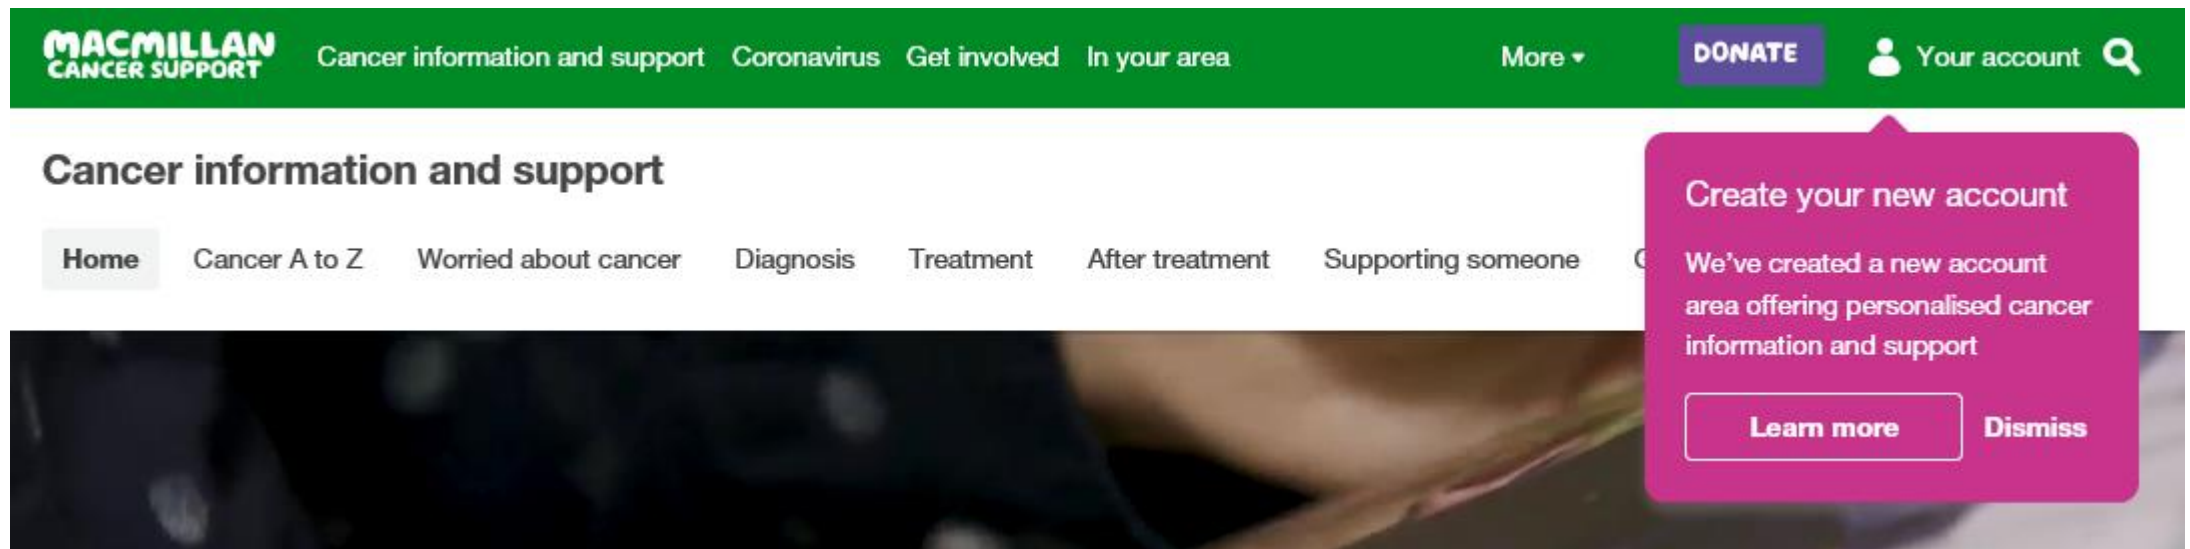

We'll keep listening

People can tell us when their situation changes so we can continue to give the information and support they need

How to join

People will initially be signposted to the new features by a "pink pop up" in the top right-hand corner of cancer information and support pages on our website, which will ask them to create an account to get personalised cancer information and support.

Personalised support

This latest release creates a truly personalised experience for anyone reaching Macmillan for support and information online.

Whether they're having tests, have just been diagnosed or in treatment, people can access information that's most useful to them.

This lays the foundation for making our services more accessible and personalised – no matter how people come to Macmillan for support and will help more people access our popular Online Community.
